GUYANESE FIRM LAUNCHES REGION'S FIRST SPECIALIZED ENERGY PRICING, BENCHMARK AND VALUATION ADVISORY

Georgetown, Guyana – June 2026

Georgetown Capital Management Inc. has officially launched Revora Energy in Guyana as the region's first dedicated energy pricing, benchmark and valuation advisory. Operating at the intersection of physical and financial markets, the firm has been established to support governments, commodity traders, producers, refiners and industrial consumers in understanding energy pricing, navigating physical market transactions and managing market volatility.

While much of the public discussion surrounding the sector focuses on production volumes, infrastructure and investment, the mechanisms that ultimately determine the value of energy commodities often receive far less attention. Yet benchmark systems, pricing methodologies and market dynamics influence billions of dollars in commercial decisions.

The firm is investing in leading price reporting agencies, benchmark data and specialised research resources to support its advisory activities across crude oil, natural gas and LNG markets.

"We have selected leading providers with access to real-time satellite imagery, vessel tracking systems and infrastructure monitoring capabilities. This investment is complemented by the development of Revora's proprietary energy market intelligence framework designed to transform market information into actionable commercial insight for Guyana and the wider region," said Alex Armogan, Chief Market Strategist.

"The competitive advantage does not come from access to data alone. It comes from the ability to connect developments across physical markets and financial markets to identify risks, opportunities and potential commercial outcomes."

A key focus of the firm is physical crude oil marketing and bidding advisory. Revora Energy supports clients throughout the crude oil marketing and sales process through market intelligence, bidder analysis, contract negotiation, benchmark assessment and commercial decision support.

“Three of our five positions have been filled and we are currently recruiting internationally for the remaining two roles due to the need for candidates with experience and familiarity with the products we use. However, we encourage individuals who are passionate about energy pricing and market intelligence to periodically visit our website for future vacancy announcements.”

We are entering a transformative period in the region’s oil and gas history. As Guyana’s production continues to expand, Suriname prepares to bring new barrels to market, interest in exploration acreage grows across the region and natural gas emerges as a significant component of the region’s energy future, Revora Energy is strategically positioned to help clients navigate and capitalize on these evolving market dynamics.
